SUGGESTIONS FOR TEACHING THE SYLLABUS

General Objectives for this syllabus have been listed early on page iii of the syllabus. The general objectives flow from the general aims of mathematics teaching listed on the first page of this syllabus. The general objectives form the basis for the selection and organization of the units and their topics. Read the general objectives very carefully before you start teaching. After teaching all the units for the year, go back and read the general aims and general objectives again to be sure you have covered both of them adequately in the course of your teaching.

Bear in mind that your class may have some pupils of different physical problems and mental abilities. Some of the children may have high mental ability, while others may be slow learners; some may be dyslexic and not able to read or spell well as the others in the class. All these are special needs children who need special attention. Ensure that you give equal attention to all pupils in your class to provide each of them equal opportunities for learning. Pupils with disabilities may have hidden mathematical talents that can only come to light if you provide them the necessary encouragement and support in class.
