Why are women more food insecure than men? Exploring socioeconomic drivers and the role of COVID-19 in widening the global gender gap Mane, E., Giaquinto, A.M., Cafiero, C., Viviani, S., Anríquez, G., 2024-03-05 Women face a higher prevalence of food insecurity than do men both on a global scale and across all regions This paper delves into the global determinants contributing to the gender gap in food insecurity and explores how the COVID 19 pandemic influenced its trajectory. Additionally, it estimates the impact of improvements in food security and incomes possible if gender gaps on farm productivity and wages were closed. Utilizing data from the Food Insecurity Experience Scale gathered from over 700 000 individuals across 121 countries, this study reveals that individuals aged 25-34 years, irrespective of their gender, and women residing in rural areas have been disproportionately affected by the pandemic. The econometric model allows the authors to estimate the elasticities of food security to income, which they then use to simulate the potential macrolevel benefits for the economy and food security if we were to eliminate the gender gaps in farm productivity and wages within agrifood systems. The findings suggest that addressing these disparities could result in an approximate USD 1 trillion increase in global gross domestic product and lift approximately 45 million people out of food insecurity. Additionally, the authors estimate that eliminating these gender disparities could reduce the current gap in food insecurity between women and men by at least 57 percent. This background paper was prepared to inform Chapters 1 and 6 of FAO's report on The status of women in agrifood systems.
