

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1a: The teacher displays knowledge of content and pedagogy	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to rely more on what is taught in the textbook. The teacher displays little understanding of pedagogical knowledge important to students' learning of the content. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of pedagogical approaches available to students' learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of a systematic of how these concepts relate to each other. The teacher understands some ways of pedagogical learning, although such knowledge may be less useful or incomplete. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogical approaches to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another. The teacher displays some awareness and understanding of pedagogical approaches and pedagogical knowledge to plan. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wider range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another and to other disciplines. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of pedagogical approaches and pedagogical knowledge and provides the link to necessary cognitive structures that most students will be utilizing. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1b: Planning Instructional Activities	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional outcomes, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students' interest, intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness, unexcitingly routine or repetitive to the activities and offer little variety.	Some of the learning activities and some of the are aligned with instructional outcomes and represent meaningful cognitive challenge, but with no different student level of an effective instructional group partially appropriate activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a meaningful structure, but the progression of activities is uneven, with only some meaningful time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional outcomes and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent significant cognitive challenge, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to learn.
2a: Creating an Environment of Learning	Relationships between interactions, both between a teacher and students and among students, are generally negative, inappropriate, or less than the teacher and/or, cultural learning goals, and if available and have. Student interactions are characterized by negative, passive, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all appropriate behavior.	Relationships between interactions, both between a teacher and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disruptive, or flawed for students' ages, cultures, and development level. Students rarely demonstrate appropriate behavior. The teacher attempts to respond to all appropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the interactions is neutral, unengaging neither positive nor conflict.	Relationships between interactions are friendly and the interactions are positive and respectful. Such interactions are appropriate to the ages, cultures, and development level of the students, with positive among students are generally positive and respectful, and students exhibit appropriate behavior. The teacher responds successfully to all appropriate behavior among students. The majority of the interactions is positive, respectful and inclusive for, through students may be aware when students who are taking instructional role.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting positive warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all students in the class. The unit is well known to students and all students feel valued and a comfortable learning environment.
2b: Managing Student Behavior	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students frequently do these in spite of the consequences of students' learning or of negative to students' behavior in comparison and some potential students' dignity.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students' behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of conduct are generally appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher responds consistently and behavior is consistent, appropriate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of conduct are consistently appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their behavior students appear to understand and accept it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and persistent. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
