Privacy in Statistical Databases Josep

Domingo-Ferrer, Emmanouil Magkos, 2010-09-14 Privacy in statistical databases is a discipline whose purpose is to provide solutions to the tension between the social political economic and corporate demand for accurate information and the legal and ethical obligation to protect the privacy of the various parties involved Those parties are the respondents the individuals and enterprises to which the database records refer the data owners those organizations spending money in data collection and the users the ones querying the database or the search engine who would like their queries to stay confidential Beyond law and ethics there are also practical reasons for data collecting agencies and corporations to invest in respondent privacy if individual respondents feel their privacy guaranteed they are likely to provide more accurate responses Data owner privacy is primarily motivated by practical considerations if an enterprise collects data at its own expense it may wish to minimize leakage of those data to other enterprises even to those with whom joint data exploitation is planned Finally user privacy results in increased user satisfaction even if it may curtail the ability of the database owner to profile users

There are at least two traditions in statistical database privacy both of which started in the 1970s the first one stems from official statistics where the discipline is also known as statistical disclosure control SDC and the second one originates from computer science and database technology In official statistics the basic concern is respondent privacy In computer science the initial motivation was also respondent privacy but from 2000 onwards growing attention has been devoted to owner privacy privacy preserving data mining and user privacy private information retrieval
