Agricultural R and D in the Developing World Philip G. Pardey, Julian M. Alston, Roley Piggott, 2006 The world's agricultural economy was transformed remarkably during the 20th century The agricultural productivity growth that fueled this change was generated primarily by agricultural R D financed and conducted by a small group of rich countries especially the United States but also Japan Germany and France In an increasingly interdependent world both rich and poor countries have depended on agricultural research conducted in the private and public laboratories of these few countries even if they have not contributed to financing the activity But now the rich country research agendas are shifting In particular they are no longer as interested in simple productivity enhancement Dietary patterns and other priorities change as incomes increase Food security concerns are still pervasive among poor people predominantly in poor countries In rich countries we see a declining emphasis on enhancing the production of staple foods and an increasing emphasis on enhancing certain attributes of food such as growing demand for processed and so called functional foods and on food production systems such as organic farming humane livestock production systems localized food sources and fair trade coffee In addition to growing differences between rich and poor countries in consumer demand for innovation research agendas may diverge because of differences in producer and processor demands Farmers in rich countries are demanding high technology inputs that often are not as relevant for subsistence agriculture such as precision farming technology or other capital intensive methods As well as differences in value adding processes to serve consumer demands differences in farm production technologies are emerging to serve the evolving agribusiness demands for farm products with specific attributes for particular food feed energy medical or industrial applications The purpose of this volume is to document the changing institutions and investments in agricultural R D in less developed countries in part to form a companion volume to Paying for Agricultural Productivity by providing a more complete global picture of the issues

Balancing Agricultural Development and Deforestation in the Brazilian Amazon Andrea Cattaneo, 2002. Since the 1970s, federal policies promoting migration and encouraging agricultural development of large farms, logging and ranching have led to the deforestation of vast areas of the Amazon rainforest. Though these policies have largely been replaced, deforestation continues. What effects do current macroeconomic and regional policies and events have on deforestation and on the well-being of settlers on the agricultural frontier? This report identifies the links between the agriculture and logging sectors in the Amazon, economic growth, poverty alleviation and natural resource degradation in the region and in Brazil as a whole. It considers the effects of currency devaluation, building roads and other infrastructure in the Amazon, property rights, adoption of technological change and fiscal incentives and disincentives to deforest. The results are sometimes counterintuitive but shed new light on why slowing deforestation is so difficult and on the trade-offs between environmental and economic goals.

Promoting Cardiovascular Health in the Developing World Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Committee on Preventing the Global Epidemic of Cardiovascular Disease: Meeting the Challenges in Developing Countries, 2010-06-29. Cardiovascular disease (CVD) once thought to be confined primarily to industrialized nations has emerged as a major health threat in developing countries. Cardiovascular disease now accounts for nearly 30 percent of deaths in low and middle income countries each year and is accompanied by significant economic repercussions. Yet most governments, global health institutions and development agencies have largely overlooked CVD as they have invested in health in developing countries. Recognizing the gap between the compelling evidence of the global CVD burden and the investment needed to prevent and control CVD, the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI) turned to the IOM for advice on how to catalyze change. In this report, the IOM recommends that the NHLBI, development agencies, nongovernmental organizations and governments work toward two essential goals: creating environments that promote heart-healthy lifestyle choices and help reduce the risk of chronic diseases; and building public health infrastructure and health systems with the capacity to implement programs that will effectively detect and reduce risk and manage CVD. To meet these goals, the IOM recommends several steps, including improving cooperation and collaboration implementing effective and feasible strategies and informing efforts through research and health surveillance Without better efforts to promote cardiovascular health global health as a whole will be undermined Australian Climate Law in Global Context Alexander Zahar, Jacqueline Peel, Lee Godden, 2012-11-14 Provides a comprehensive guide to climate change law in Australia and internationally focusing on Australia's implementation of climate related treaties Year Book Australia, 1991 No. 74, 2008 Watershed Development Projects in India J. M. Kerr, Ganesh Pangare, Vasudha Pangare, 2002-01-01 The Green Revolution that transformed irrigated agriculture elsewhere in India had little effect in the rainfed semi arid regions Agricultural productivity remained low natural resources were degrading and the people were poor In the 1980s and 1990s planners turned to watershed management to develop rainfed agriculture while conserving natural resources By the late 1990s India was spending US 500 million a year on watershed development projects Strategies ranged from the purely technical to those that emphasized social organization Little systematic analysis exists however on the success of the different approaches This study based on a survey of 86 villages in Andhra Pradesh and Maharashtra states attempts to fill that information gap by evaluating the projects relative success in raising agricultural productivity improving natural resource management and reducing poverty In looking at the question of what approaches enable a project to succeed it uses both quantitative and qualitative analysis to compare project and nonproject villages before and after the projects were implemented The authors find that projects involving the villagers in planning and decisionmaking performed better than their technocratic top down counterparts but projects that combined participation with sound technical input performed best of all All projects faced difficulties in ensuring that poor people shared the benefits of watershed development Food Security in the Developing World Muhammad Khalid Bashir, Steven G. M. Schilizzi, Ghaffar Ali, 2024-02-12 An introduction to the urgent global question of how to feed the hungry Global food production has never been more abundant yet nearly a billion people worldwide suffer from malnutrition virtually all of them in the developing world Food security in these countries is a global humanitarian issue which becomes more urgent with every passing year There is a vital need to understand the nature and causes of food scarcity in developing countries in order to see to it that our global bounty reaches the hungry people who need it Food Security in the Developing World offers a comprehensive single volume introduction to the subject It focuses on three core issues food availability food accessibility and food utilization in order to produce a rounded picture of the causes and possible solutions for food scarcity Thorough and accessible it promises to help researchers and policymakers address this growing humanitarian crisis in a reasoned and targeted way Food Security in the Developing World readers will also find Future oriented approach which continuously highlights paths forward Detailed discussion of topics including climate change and agricultural productivity price volatility diet and nutrition and many more Examples and case studies drawn from across the developing world including Sudan Uganda Nepal and Afghanistan Food Security in the Developing World is ideal for food scientists and technologists students

Encyclopedia of the Developing World Thomas M. Leonard, 2013-10-18 A RUSA 2007 Outstanding Reference Title The Encyclopedia of the Developing World is a comprehensive work on the historical and current status of developing countries. Containing more than 750 entries, the Encyclopedia encompasses primarily the years since 1945 and defines development broadly, addressing not only economics but also civil society and social progress. Entries cover the most important theories and measurements of development, relate historical events, movements, and concepts to development both internationally and regionally, where applicable, examine the contributions of the most important persons and organizations, and detail the progress made within geographic regions and by individual countries.

Sustainable Minerals Operations in the Developing World

Geological Society of London, 2005. The sustainable development of minerals, which are non-renewable resources, is a major challenge in today's world. In this regard, the true definition of sustainability is a debating point in itself: can such a concept exist with respect to non-renewable resources? Perhaps the ideal sustainability model is one that minimizes negative environmental impact and maximizes benefits to society, the economy, and regional/national development. Developed and near-developed economies rely for commodity supplies on developing countries, where major mining operations are often a mainstay of the domestic economy. Limited environmental regulation and low wages lead to charges of exploitation. Also, large numbers of people have no alternative to living by informal, often dangerous, artisanal mining. This Special Publication gives examples from developing countries from all scales of mineral extraction. The volume reviews environmental, economic, health, and social problems and highlights the need to solve these before sustainability can be achieved. The better solutions require mutual understanding through full involvement of all stakeholders, education, training, and investment so that small-scale and artisanal mines can grow into well-managed operations. At larger scales, most major international mining companies have now improved their practices and are monitoring their progress, although there is no room for complacency in this rapidly changing area.
