

Joint Anatomy and Physiology-The Chicken Wing Dissection

Background

Movement in the human body results from a series of structures that work collaboratively to provide range of motion. Skeletal muscles, connective tissue and bones all play a significant role in movement. Joints occur where bones articulate. Joints are classified as synovial, fibrous or cartilaginous. Synovial joints include six different types of joints. These include ball and socket, hinge, condylar (ellipsoid), pivot, plane, and saddle joints. In this activity you will observe the hinge joint of the wing of a chicken. It is analogous to the hinge joint found in the human arm between the radius and ulna and the humerus.

In today's activity you will explore the structure and function of a chicken wing and compare it to that of a human arm. This will allow you to discover the various types of tissue involved in movement at the macroscopic level and develop an understanding of how a particular type of synovial joint- the hinge joint works.

Pre-Lab Questions:

1. How are the major joint types different?
2. In this lab you will observe a synovial joint-the hinge joint. Explain how hinge joints work.
3. From prior knowledge, what are the relationships between bones, ligaments, tendons and cartilage in the human skeleton?

Procedure Part I

Use the copy of the PowerPoint slides to dissect the chicken wing. Follow the directions in the handouts.

Lab Questions: As you do the lab, answer the following questions in your lab notebook.

1. Determine if your chicken wing is a left or right wing. Explain.
2. Make a detailed drawing to scale and include the joint you observe, the ligaments, tendons, cartilage, bones, muscles, fat, skin and joint type as you proceed through the lab.
3. When grabbing the wing tip and shoulder describe what happens to the bones and muscles.
4. What muscles attached to which bones and where? Describe this.
5. After finding the tendons of the chicken wing, cut them and pull away the muscles. Find the ligaments. What do you notice about the ligaments? Compare them to the tendons.
6. Identify the cartilage in the joint. What is the purpose of cartilage?
7. Make a table like the one below in your lab notebook.

Tissue	Description of the Macroscopic Structures	Tissue it attaches to Fat
Muscle
Tendon
Ligament
Cartilage
