Fieldwork Is Not What It Used to Be James D. Faubion, George E. Marcus, 2011-10-15 Over the past two decades anthropologists have been challenged to rethink the nature of ethnographic research the meaning of fieldwork and the role of ethnographers Ethnographic fieldwork has cultural social and political ramifications that have been much discussed and acted upon but the training of ethnographers still follows a very traditional pattern this volume engages and takes its point of departure in the experiences of ethnographers in the making that encourage alternative models for professional training in fieldwork and its intellectual contexts The work done by contributors to Fieldwork Is Not What It Used to Be articulates at the strategic point of career making research features of this transformation in progress Setting aside traditional anxieties about ethnographic authority the authors revisit fieldwork with fresh initiative In search of better understandings of the contemporary research process itself they assess the current terms of the engagement of fieldworkers with their subjects address the constructive open ended forms by which the conclusions of fieldwork might take shape and offer an accurate and useful description of what it means to become and to be an anthropologist today
