The Cognitive Science of Religion

James A. Van Slyke, 2016-03-23 The cognitive science of religion is a relatively new academic field in the study of the origins and causes of religious belief and behaviour The focal point of empirical research is the role of basic human cognitive functions in the formation and transmission of religious beliefs However many theologians and religious scholars are concerned that this perspective will reduce and replace explanations based in religious traditions beliefs and values This book attempts to bridge the reductionist divide between science and religion through examination and critique of different aspects of the cognitive science of religion and offers a conciliatory approach that investigates the multiple causal factors involved in the emergence of religion

How the Light Gets In

Aspectuality

Sarah Dessì Schmid, 2019-12-16 This synchronic study presents a new onomasiological frame theoretical model for the description classification and theoretical analysis of the cross linguistic content category aspectuality It deals specifically with those pieces of information which in their interplay constitute the aspectual value of states of affairs The focus is on Romance Languages although the model can be applied just as well to other languages in that it is underpinned by a principle grounded in a fundamental cognitive ability the delimitation principle Unlike traditional approaches which generally have a semasiological orientation and strictly adhere to a semantic differentiation between grammatical aspect and lexical aspect

Aktionsart this study makes no such differentiation and understands these as merely different formal realisations of one and the same content category aspectuality
