Natures Building Blocks An A Z Guide To The Elements:

Nature's Building Blocks John Emsley, 2001 Everything we see around us is made of the chemical elements they are Nature's building blocks Our own bodies contain about 30 of them some in abundance some in trace amounts but nevertheless vital to our health and some that are positively harmful The Earth consists of around 90 elements and again some are abundant such as the silicon and oxygen of rocks and soils while some are so rare that they make gold seem cheap yet even these can be part of our everyday life The total number of known elements is now 115 at the last count although most of the 25 new elements that have been synthesized in the past half century have existed for less than a day Some however have accumulated until they now threaten the environment Nature's Building Blocks explains the what why and wherefore of the chemical elements Arranged alphabetically from Actinium to Zirconium it is a complete guide to all 115 of those that are currently known and especially those which comprise everything we encounter in our everyday life The entry on each element reveals where it came from what role it may have in the human body and the foods that contain it There are also sections on its discovery its part in human health or illness the uses and misuses to which it is put and its environmental role A list of the main scientific data and outline properties are given for every element and the section ends with an Element of Surprise which highlights some unexpected way in which each element impinges on our everyday life Nature's Emsley's Nature's Building Blocks was published in paperback in 2003. In this readable, informative and fascinating guide to the elements are entries on each of the 100 odd chemical elements arranged alphabetically from actinium to zirconium. Each entry comprises an explanation of where the element's name comes from, followed by the element's role it plays in living things, Element of history: how and when it was discovered, Economic element: what it is used for, Environmental element: where it occurs, how much, Chemical element facts: figures and narrative, and Element of surprise: an amazing little known fact. Since publication of the first edition there have been a number of developments. Three new chemical elements have been named and validated: darmstadtium, roentgenium and copernicium, and the section on trans-fermium elements has now been incorporated into the main part of the book. Economic uses of elements have grown and some quite rare elements such as scandium are now economically important, along with updates to elements such as gold due to new roles in industry. Fully revised and updated for 2010, this browsable compendium holds a wealth of useful information.

Halogens and Noble Gases, Second Edition Monica Halka,Brian Nordstrom,2019-12-01 In spite of their adjacency in the periodic table halogens and nonmetals have very different properties Halogens are among the most chemically reactive elements in the periodic table exhibiting a diverse chemistry in terms of the large numbers of compounds they can form On the other hand noble gases are the least chemically reactive elements In fact before the 1960s chemists referred to these elements as inert gases because it was believed that they exhibited no chemistry whatsoever Providing the basics of these elements including their role in history and some of the important scientists involved in their discovery this newly updated full color resource features up to date scientific understanding in a clear and accessible format Halogens and Noble Gases Second Edition examines the ways humans use halogens and noble gases and the resulting benefits and challenges to society health and the environment Fluorine chlorine bromine iodine helium and krypton are covered in this eBook along with the fundamentals of chemistry and physics as well as possible future developments in halogen and noble gas science and its applications

Sustainability Science and Engineering Martin A. Abraham,2005-12-16 Sustainable development is commonly defined as development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs Sustainability in engineering incorporates ethical and social issues into the design of products and processes that will be used to benefit society as a whole Sustainability Science and Engineering Volume 1 Defining Principles sets out a series of Sustainable Engineering Principles that will help engineers design products and services to meet societal needs with minimal impact on the global ecosystem Using specific examples and illustrations the authors cleverly demonstrate opportunities for sustainable engineering providing readers with valuable insight to applying these principles This book is ideal for technical and non technical readers looking to enhance their understanding of the impact of sustainability in a technical society Defines the principles of sustainable engineering Provides specific examples of the application of sustainable engineering in industry Represents the viewpoints of current leaders in the field and describes future needs in new technologies      The Last Sorcerers Richard Morris,2003-11-10 They started with four earth air fire and water From these basics they sought to understand the essential ingredients of the world Those who could see further those who understood that the four were just the beginning were the last sorcerers and the world s first chemists What we now call chemistry began in the fiery cauldrons of mystics and sorcerers seeking not to make a better world through science but rather to make themselves richer through magic formulas and con games But among these early magicians frauds and con artists were a few far seeing alchemists who through rigorous experimentation transformed mysticism into science By the 18th century the building blocks of nature the elements of which all matter is composed were on the verge of being discovery Initially it was not easy to determine whether a substance really was an element Was water just water plain and simple Or could it be the sum of other unknown and maybe unknowable parts And if water was made up of other substances how could it be broken down into discreet fundamental and measurable components Scientific historians generally credit the great 18th century French chemist Antoine Lavoisier with addressing these fundamental questions and ultimately modernizing the field of chemistry Through his meticulous and precise work this chaotic new field of scientific inquiry was given order Exacting by nature Lavoisier painstakingly set about performing experiments that would provide lasting and verifiable proofs of various chemical theories Unfortunately the outspoken Lavoisier eventually lost his head in the Terror but others would follow his lead carefully examining measuring and recording their findings As the field slowly progressed another pioneer was to emerged almost 100 years later Dimitri Mendeleev an eccentric genius who cut his flowing hair and beard but once a year sought to answer the most pressing questions that remained to chemists Why did some elements have properties that resembled those of others Were there certain natural groups of elements And if so how many and what elements fit into them It was Mendeleev who finally addressed all these issues when he constructed the first Periodic Table in the late 1800s But between and after Lavoisier and Mendeleev were a host of other colorful brilliant scientists who made their mark on the field of chemistry Depicting the lively careers of these scientists and their contributions while carefully deconstructing the history and the science author Richard Morris skillfully brings it all to life Hailed by Kirkus Reviews as a clear and lively writer with a penchant for down to earth examples Morris s gift for explanation and pure entertainment is abundantly obvious Taking a cue from the great chemists themselves Morris has brewed up a potent combination of the alluringly obscure and the historically momentous spiked with just the right dose of quirky and ribald detail to deliver a magical brew of history science and personalities
