Energy Resources in Africa Herick Othieno, Joseph Awange, 2015-10-16 This book provides information on the distribution of the available energy resources throughout the continent and how it is linked to the development of individual states Africa is considered one of the poorest continents in the world mainly because its development has historically depended on imported resources including technical expertise This view and its associated resource management strategy are based on the perception that Africa lacks sufficient energy resources to drive its development agenda Analyses of individual countries energy potentials exploitation levels and distribution mechanisms are provided with a view to identifying additional factors that are stifling Africa s economic development One critical factor is the relationship between available energy resources and the energy mixes chosen by different states and how these can be exploited to produce the right blend of energy for various applications such as industrial transport domestic and recreational uses The authors provide an in depth analysis of the advantages and disadvantages of different energy sources in terms of their environmental industrialization and distribution costs impacts and the development options best suited for improving Africa s economic situation This analysis is based on the assertion that Africa is indeed blessed with abundant energy resources which have not been effectively exploited The book not only reviews Africa s energy situation in general but also reveals that while there are certainly circumstances peculiar to individual countries the similarities especially within Sub Saharan African countries outweigh the differences That being said the challenges and available opportunities in each country should be viewed with due consideration given to the prevailing national resource management environment Many initiatives in Africa fail because of the many loopholes in the management structures which allow corruption theft and mere selfishness to thrive In addition to the negative impacts of these factors on implementation activities there is also a general lack of institutional support for initiatives that could otherwise be very progressive Thus taken together these retrogressive practices stifle African energy development plans The book offers a valuable guide for developers investors researchers and environmentalist providing in depth insights on the relationship between available energy resources and development trends in Africa By harnessing the wind and sun your vast geothermal energy and rivers for hydropower you can turn this climate threat into an economic opportunity US President Obama s address to the African Union 2015

Conserving Biomass Energy in Sub-Saharan Africa J. F. Swartzendruber,1992 Towards Negotiated Co-management of Natural Resources in Africa L. B. Venema,1999 Within the field of management of natural resources this book focuses on the various approaches of policy formulation and implementation The question central to this book is how to co operate with people the various categories of residents as well as non residents in the rural areas in a top down a participatory or a contractual co management way On the basis of a comparative analysis of 12 case studies in the book these three approaches are thoroughly discussed and their internal and external constraints examined The book starts with an editorial chapter discussing the recent administrative and political developments in Africa as well as the new opportunities which they offer for policies in the field of environment and development The question is brought up whether the recent processes of decentralization democratization and empowerment of local organizations have indeed created new opportunities or that they have only superficially changed the political culture of the countries concerned In the concluding chapter of the book the approaches are contrasted to each other as logical models each with its own potentiality and limitations Conclusions are formulated why the top down approach must result in improvization to escape from failure and why the participatory approach risks to end up into a mixed balance Special attention is given to the conditions and the prospects for the contractual or co management approach which has been introduced into Africa only recently Under certain conditions this approach seems rather promising The Environment and Development in Africa Moses K.

Merrey,2014-03-01 The purpose of this paper is to synthesize the available knowledge and lessons learned from past experiences in promoting kitchen or home gardens for food production with a special emphasis on water management The benefits of home gardens for better family nutrition health status of children and mothers and as an entry point for empowering women have been documented in some studies However there is very little specific evidence to confirm these benefits The paper also reviews some of the water management practices and garden technologies used in home and market gardens It recommends building on current home gardening practices starting with diagnostic appraisals of actual gardening practices and moving on to participatory action research focused on evaluating promising water management technologies and testing implementation of strategies that empower women Degraded Forests in Eastern Africa Frans Bongers,Timm Tennigkeit,2010 Forest degradation as a result of logging shifting cultivation agriculture and urban development is a major issue throughout the tropics It leads to loss in soil fertility water resources and biodiversity as well as contributes to climate change Efforts are therefore required to try to minimize further degradation and restore tropical forests in a sustainable way This is the first research based book to examine this problem in East Africa The specific focus is on the forests of Ethiopia Tanzania and Uganda but the lessons learned are shown to be applicable to neighbouring countries and others in the tropics A wide range of forest types are covered from dry Miombo forest and afro-montane forests to forest savannah mosaics and wet forest types Current management practices are assessed and examples of good practice presented The role of local people is also emphasized The authors describe improved management and restoration through silviculture plantation forestry and agroforestry leading to improvements in timber production biodiversity conservation and the livelihoods of local people Congressional Presentation United States. Agency for International Development, Electric Capitalism David A. McDonald, 2012-05-16 Although Africa is the most under-supplied region of the world for electricity its economies are utterly dependent on it There are enormous inequalities in electricity access with industry receiving abundant supplies of cheap power while more than 80 per cent of the continent's population remain off the power grid Africa is not unique in this respect but levels of inequality are particularly pronounced here due to the inherent unevenness of electric capitalism on the continent This book provides an innovative theoretical framework for understanding electricity and capitalism in Africa followed by a series of case studies that examine different aspects of electricity supply and consumption The chapters focus primarily on South Africa due to its dominance in the electricity market but there are important lessons to be learned for the continent as a whole not least because of the aggressive expansion of South African capital into other parts of Africa to develop and control electricity Africa is experiencing a renewed scramble for its electricity resources conjuring up images of a recolonisation of the continent along the power grid Written by leading academics and activists Electric Capitalism offers a cutting edge yet accessible overview of one of the most important developments in Africa today with direct implications for health gender equity environmental sustainability and socio-economic justice From nuclear power through prepaid electricity meters to the massive dam projects taking place in central Africa an understanding of electricity reforms on the continent helps shape our insights into development debates in Africa in particular and the expansion of neoliberal capitalism more generally Plant Resources of Tropical Africa (PROTA) Dominique Louppe, 2008 Africa and World War II Judith Ann-Marie Byfield, Carolyn A.
