Dara O'Rourke,

Associate Professor, Department of Environmental Sciences, Policy and Management, University of California, Berkeley and Hajo Mattar, President and Board Member, Akatu Institute for Conscious Consumption on behalf of the Global Agenda Council on Sustainable Consumption

To consume sustainably does not mean to consume less but to consume differently. From an environmental point of view, humanity already consumes 50% more in renewable natural resources than the Earth is able to regenerate. This is true at a time when only 1.1 billion, out of 7 billion people are responsible for 78% of total consumption. The emerging middle class will add another 3 billion people to the mass consumption market in the years ahead. More than four planets would be needed to supply all the goods and services that this expanded market will require assuming that the present models of consumption and production persist. To address this imbalance, a sustainable model of consumption is needed. Such a model will require a complete redesign in the way products and services supply well-being to humanity. Consumers are increasingly aware of the need for a more sustainable model of consumption. This presents a great opportunity for companies to drive growth by redesigning the ways their products and services supply well-being to consumers. For consumers to recognize and value the new ways in which well-being is supplied, companies will need to play a role in educating consumers to change their behaviour when buying, using and discarding products or services. By capitalizing on these opportunities, companies will create sustainable benefits to society and the environment, as well as to themselves, the economy and individual consumers.

Intelligence J Mark Munoz, 2017-11-10 Global Business Intelligence refers to an organization's ability to gather process and analyze pertinent international information in order to make optimal business decisions in a timely manner. With a challenging economic and geopolitical environment, companies and executives need to be adept at information gathering in order to manage emerging challenges and gain competitive advantages. This book, Global Business Intelligence, assembles a cast of international experts and thought leaders and explores the implications of business intelligence on contemporary management. Global Business Intelligence will be a key resource for researchers, academics, students, and policy makers alike in the fields of International Business Management, Business Strategy, and Geopolitics, as well as related disciplines like Political Science, Economics, and Geography.

Peacemaking and the Extractive Industries Natalie Ralph, 2017-11-22 Peacemaking and the Extractive Industries addresses a significant gap in research on the political and diplomatic role of multinational corporations in peace processes in intrastate conflict. Corporate Peacemaking: The author focuses on corporations in the oil and mining sectors supporting or participating in peace negotiations and mediation. The chapters explore national level peace processes as well as those at community and global levels. While the focus is on extractive companies, the findings are valuable to companies from all industries looking at peace-related processes. This groundbreaking book gives a comprehensive picture of how Corporate Peacemaking currently works, how it can be developed and implemented, and how it is likely to impact global governance and corporate culture in the future. The book demonstrates that Corporate Peacemaking has the potential to be a powerful element in international governance and peace efforts, and Ralph shows through the business case that companies as well as communities will benefit. Ralph presents a new framework for Corporate Peace that will assist companies from all sectors in countries experiencing violent conflict, in addition to instability, human rights abuses, and poor governance. Based on rigorous academic research with practical case studies, it is essential reading for practitioners, academics, policy makers, and NGOs.

Economic Woman Frances Raday, 2019-05-14 The author introduces the concept of economic woman and makes her visible in duality with and opposition to the exclusive model of economic man. Economic man has epitomized neo-liberal capitalism, which embraces competition and maximization of profit, resulting in a steep increase in economic inequality. The book demonstrates that women's inequality is a crucial factor in economic inequality, which cannot be fully understood without relating to women's situation and that economic woman cannot thrive in the conditions of economic inequality created under global neo-liberalism. Emphasising the international human rights guarantees of women's right to equality in all fields of life, the author documents woman's increased participation in political, public, financial, and corporate institutions, employment, and entrepreneurship, with some women reaching high profile positions. Nevertheless, using global data, she reveals that economic woman lags behind with a severe economic power deficit, an unfulfilled promise of equal employment opportunity, a gendered impact of poverty, and barriers to gender equality in the family. The book analyses the trap of women's increased burden of breadwinning in the context of discriminatory laws and practices infrastructural failures and policy gaps which preempt achievement of gender equality in economic life The book is intended for the general reader academics students policy makers and NGOs It shows economic woman at a global crossroads between a universal paradigm of gender equality and pervasive barriers to equal economic opportunity The author demonstrates that tackling gender inequality restoring welfare priorities and reducing economic inequality are inextricably linked Human rights and governments have a vital role to play in addressing them all to create a sustainable economic infrastructure for the lives of women and men
