Dear Sirs:

We, three brothers, return our Eagle Scout awards in protest of the Boy Scouts of America's discrimination against gay scouts and leaders. We feel this policy directly contradicts scouting values and hinders BSA's ability to serve and help boys. We are distressed that we feel we have to take this course.

We were all active in scouting in the late 60s and early 70s. Scouting was a big part of our lives: staff members on the local council camp staff; vigil and brotherhood members of the Order of the Arrow; treks at Philmont and Charles Sommers Canoe Base; staff member at Philmont. Scouting was an important part of our lives and through it we learned to interact constructively with people of diverse backgrounds. Our career paths in environmental remediation, public health, and public land management were all influenced by our scouting experiences.

Your current policy discriminating against gays does your members no service. One of the great traditions of scouting is helping boys learn to respect the values and differences of others. Now, you teach scouts that people they must deal with in daily life, in school, at work, or in the military, are so deviant they can not be allowed membership in your organization. Instead, you should be helping them learn to interact positively with all people regardless of differences.

This policy prevents you from serving boys who need the sorts of experiences you provide more than most. Gay youngsters have a hard time. They do not choose to be gay—anyone who pays attention to the difficulty and hardship of growing up gay must understand this. Research shows that gay boys suffer from bullying and are at high risk of depression and suicide. The BSA policy towards gays contributes to this. If Scouting chose to provide a welcoming environment for these boys they would have an easier time growing into productive adults.

We think BSA has abdicated their moral authority to instruct boys. Instead, you have bowed to the wishes of an intolerant minority. You are being left behind as society becomes more tolerant of differences—a trend you should embrace. You harm your members and prevent yourselves from serving boys who need your help. Please reconsider this wrong-headed policy and regain your ability to fulfill your mission of helping boys grow into productive, engaged, and moral adults.
