Flint Daggers in Prehistoric Europe Catherine J. Frieman, Berit Valentin Eriksen, 2015-12-31 For more than a century flint daggers have been among the most closely studied and most heavily published later prehistoric lithic tools. It is well established that they are found across Europe and beyond and that many were widely circulated over many generations. Yet few researchers have attempted to discuss the entirety of the flint dagger phenomenon. The present volume brings together papers that address questions of the regional variability and socio-technical complexity of flint daggers and their production. It focuses on the typology, chronology, technology, functionality, and meaning of flint and other lithic daggers produced primarily in Europe but also in the Eastern Mediterranean and East Asia in prehistory. The 14 papers by leading researchers provide a comprehensive overview of the state of knowledge concerning various flint dagger corpora as well as potential avenues for the development of a research agenda across national, regional, and disciplinary boundaries. The volume originates from a session held at the 2011 meeting of the European Association of Archaeology but includes additional commissioned contributions.

Bronzization: Essays in Bronze Age Archaeology Heide W. Nørgaard, Samantha S. Reiter, 2025-02-20 A collection of state-of-the-art articles which integrate new insights from the many advances in research on the subject into a new and up-to-date vision of the Bronze Age as a Europeanised or even globalised period. Papers revise current understanding of bronzization and bronzification in line with a holistic view of recent scientific advances.

Prehistoric Europe Julian Heath, 2025-08-07 A full-color examination of 50 fascinating and important archaeological discoveries from prehistoric Europe. Countless archaeological sites and artefacts relating to the diverse prehistoric peoples who occupied the landscapes of Europe thousands of years ago have been unearthed either by archaeologists or by lucky individuals who stumbled across them by chance. Prehistoric Europe: 50 Great Discoveries examines a small but carefully chosen selection of sites and artefacts from among this abundance of archaeological evidence.

all of which are remarkable and provides fascinating insights into Europe's distant past and its long lost prehistoric societies. These 50 discoveries cover some sixty thousand years of European prehistory beginning in the Middle Paleolithic Old Stone Age the time of our enigmatic ancient cousins the Neanderthals and ending in the Iron Age the time of Celtic society and marking the last chapter in the remarkable story of prehistoric Europe. Lying between the Middle Paleolithic and the Iron Age discoveries are those from Mesolithic Middle Stone Age Neolithic New Stone Age Chalcolithic Copper Age and Bronze Age Europe. The Mesolithic Neolithic Chalcolithic and Bronze Age mark the time of Europe's final hunter gatherer societies its first farming communities and the emergence of metalworking respectively.

Making Journeys Catriona D. Gibson, Kerri Cleary, Catherine J. Frieman, 2021-02-01. Despite notable explorations of past dynamics much of the archaeological literature on mobility remains dominated by accounts of earlier prehistoric gatherer hunters or the long distance exchange of materials. Refinements of scientific dating techniques isotope trace element and aDNA analyses in conjunction with phenomenological investigation computer aided landscape modeling and GIS style approaches to large data sets allow us to follow the movement of people animals and objects in the past with greater precision and conviction. One route into exploring mobility in the past may be through exploring the movements and biographies of artifacts. Challenges lie not only in tracing the origins and final destinations of objects but in the less tangible in between journeys and the hands they passed through. Biographical approaches to artifacts include the recognition that culture contact and hybridity affect material culture in meaningful ways. Furthermore discrete and bounded sites still dominate archaeological inquiry leaving the spaces and connectivities between features and settlements unmapped. These are linked to an under explored middle spectrum of mobility a range nestled between everyday movements and one off ambitious voyages. We wish to explore how these travels involved entangled meshworks of people animals objects knowledge sets and identities. By crossing and re crossing cultural contextual and tenorial boundaries such journeys could create diasporic and novel communities ideas and materialities.

An archaeology of innovation Catherine J. Frieman, 2021-02-16. An archaeology of innovation is the first monograph length investigation of innovation and the innovation process from an archaeological perspective. It interrogates the idea of innovation that permeates our popular media and our political and scientific discourse setting this against the long term perspective that only archaeology can offer. Case studies span the entire breadth of human history from our earliest hominin ancestors to the contemporary world. The book argues that the present narrow focus on pushing the adoption of technical innovations ignores the complex interplay of social technological and environmental systems that underlies truly innovative societies the inherent connections between new technologies technologists and social structure that give them meaning and make them valuable and the significance and value of conservative social practices that lead to the frequent rejection of innovations.

The Routledge Handbook of Gender Archaeology Marianne Moen, Unn Pedersen, 2024-12-02. This volume presents a comprehensive overview of gender archaeology both theory and practice and contributes a substantial and definitive reference work by bringing together state of the art research theoretical overviews and the latest debates in the field Responding to the shifts in the theoretical landscape and the societal and political frameworks within which we produce our knowledge chapters create both a solid theoretical baseline which help readers grasp the significance of gender in archaeology as well as offer perspectives on how to engender produced knowledge about the past In line with recent focus on the shortcomings of gender and archaeological representation chapters also detangle academic discourse and popular representations in order to present novel ways of successfully negotiating the pitfalls of gendered ideas about past behaviours By encouraging novel ways of integrating theoretical perspectives with scrutiny of gender stereotypes original empirical examinations of identity markers and behaviours and re examinations of static representations of identities through new lenses such as intersectional perspectives personhood and materiality debates the volume is theoretically rich and will simultaneously provide a necessary benchmark for future archaeological discourses Finally it will incorporate perspectives from researchers with diverse backgrounds and viewpoints to provide a truly comprehensive overview It will not shy away from engaging with politically contentious issues surrounding knowledge production but will include perspectives from researchers whose focus is less on feminist critiques and more on gender and identities Thus the volume bridges the two most prominent directions currently discernible within the focus area namely feminist re examinations on the one hand and research focused more on bodily practice and gendered experiences on the other The Routledge Handbook of Gender Archaeology is an invaluable resource for students and researchers in gender archaeology as well as gender studies more widely

Ancient Scandinavia Theron Douglas Price, 2015 Ancient Scandinavia provides a comprehensive overview of the archaeological history of Denmark Norway and Sweden Flint Daggers in Prehistoric Europe Catherine Frieman, 2015-11-01 This book comprises the first multi regional overview of lithic daggers from Europe and beyond with papers on the typology chronology technology and function of these famous objects by leading scholars from around Europe and the world

Bronze Age Worlds Robert Johnston, 2020-10-26 Bronze Age Worlds brings a new way of thinking about kinship to the task of explaining the formation of social life in Bronze Age Britain and Ireland Britain and Ireland's diverse landscapes and societies experienced varied and profound transformations during the twenty fifth to eighth centuries BC People's lives were shaped by migrations changing beliefs about death making and thinking with metals and living in houses and field systems This book offers accounts of how these processes emerged from social life from events places and landscapes informed by a novel theory of kinship Kinship was a rich and inventive sphere of culture that incorporated biological relations but was not determined by them Kinship formed personhood and collective belonging and associated people with nonhuman beings things and places The differences in kinship and kinwork across Ireland and Britain brought textures to social life and the formation of Bronze Age worlds Bronze Age Worlds offers new perspectives to archaeologists and anthropologists interested in the place of kinship in Bronze Age societies and cultural development

Negotiating

Migrations Daniela Hofmann, Catherine J. Frieman, Martin Furholt, Stefan Burmeister, Niels Nørkjær Johannsen, 2024-08-08

This open access volume uses archaeological case studies mainly from the European Neolithic but also from the Pacific the US Southwest the medieval Migration Period and the historical Great Lakes to discuss how a focus on small scale inter personal relations can help us understand migration events in archaeology While most scholarship focuses on migrations that took place using isotopes and aDNA this book offers a new approach by exploring ideas about why they happened The ebook editions of this book are available open access under a CC BY NC ND 4.0 licence on bloomsburycollections.com Open access was funded by the Centre of Advanced Studies in Oslo

Globalization and Transculturality from Antiquity to the Pre-Modern World Serena Autiero, Matthew Adam Cobb, 2021-09-30

This book explores how globalization and transculturality are useful theoretical tools for studying pre modern societies and their long distance connections Among the themes explored are how these concepts can enhance our understanding of trade networks the spread of religions the diffusion of global fashions the migration of technologies public and private initiatives and wider cultural changes In this book archaeologists and ancient historians demonstrate how in diverse contexts from the Bronze Age to colonial times humanity displayed an urge and an incredible capacity to connect with distant lands and people Adopting and modifying approaches originally developed for the study of contemporary societies it is possible to enhance our understanding of the human past not only in economic terms but also the cultural significance of such interconnections This book provides both the wider public and the specialist reader with a fresh point of view on global issues relating to the past in turn allowing us to look anew at developments in the contemporary world Its large chronological and geographical scope should prove appealing to those who want more than mere Eurocentric history Teachers and students of world history and archaeology will find this book a useful resource

The Oxford Handbook of Neolithic Europe Chris Fowler, Jan Harding, Daniela Hofmann, 2015-03-26 The Neolithic a period in which the first sedentary agrarian communities were established across much of Europe has been a key topic of archaeological research for over a century However the variety of evidence across Europe the range of languages in which research is carried out and the way research traditions in different countries have developed makes it very difficult for both students and specialists to gain an overview of continent wide trends The Oxford Handbook of Neolithic Europe provides the first comprehensive geographically extensive thematic overview of the European Neolithic from Iberia to Russia and from Norway to Malta offering both a general introduction and a clear exploration of key issues and current debates surrounding evidence and interpretation Chapters written by leading experts in the field examine topics such as the movement of plants animals ideas and people including recent trends in the application of genetics and isotope analyses cultural change from the first appearance of farming to the first metal artefacts domestic architecture subsistence material culture monuments and burial and other treatments of the dead In doing so the volume also considers the history of research and sets out agendas and themes for future work in the field

study of prehistoric innovation the author argues that a range of technologies and practices need to be considered in order to place innovation into the pre existing social and technological systems in which it functioned and to assess the means by which it was accepted and valued In particular the study focuses on how archaeological interpretations of stone objects and stone working can help understand the adoption and continued presence of metal and metallurgy in prehistoric Europe The author compares traditionally identified stone skeuomorphs that is meaningful imitations of metal with their putative prototypes Three separate corpora of these stone skeuomorphs have been identified polished stone shafthole axes from the Netherlands and surrounding areas identified as copies of perforated copper axes flint daggers from Jutland identified as copies of bronze metal hilted daggers and jet spacer plate ornaments from the British Isles Ireland and Brittany identified as copies of hammered gold lunulae
