Evidence of Evolution- PreAP

Background: Much evidence has been found to indicate that living things have evolved or changed gradually during their natural history. The study of fossils as well as work in embryology, biochemistry, and comparative morphology provides evidence for evolution.

Objective: To compare homologous, analogous, and vestigial structures and analyze their significance in evolutionary history.

I. Fossils

Study the figure at right.

1. Which rock layer is the oldest? _____
2. Which rock layer is the youngest? _____
3. Explain what can scientists learn about evolution when comparing different fossils in different rock layers? (Use terms like relatedness, extinction, transition etc.) You must write at least two complete sentences.

II. Homologous Structures

1. Carefully examine the drawings of the bones in Figure 1 on the next page. Look for similarities among the various animals.
 - i. Color each bone of the human arm a different color. All bones of the wrist (carpals) should be a single color, and the bone groups of the hand (metacarpals and phalanges) should be a another color. Then color the corresponding bones (containing the same pattern) in each of the other animals the same color as the human bone (i.e. if you color the humerus blue in the human, it should be blue in all the other animals).
 - ii. Describe at least two functions of each set of bones below:

Animal	Functions
Human
Whale
Cat
Bat
Bird
Crocodile

Table 1

- iii. Are the bones arranged in a similar way in each animal? _____

These structures on the following page are formed in similar ways during embryonic development and share like arrangements; however, they have somewhat different forms and functions. They are called homologous structures. What does the prefix "homo" mean? _____
