Agriculture and Biology Notes A. S. Campbell, 1922 Notes on Agriculture J. W. Thompson, 1925 Crop production and management. Book 1 of 4 books. Course notes, 1988 Principles of Agriculture S. Tomlinson, 1880
Digest of Notes E. R. Sawyer, 1908 The principles of agriculture William Bland (of Hartlip.), 1827 Farming Notes, 19?? Notes on the Rudiments of Agriculture Alexander Johnstone, J. D. Johnstone, 1892 Principles of Agriculture (elementary Stage) S. Tomlinson (Stud. Inst. C. E.), 1880 The Principles of Agriculture William Bland (of Hartlip, Sittingbourne.), The Book of the Farm: Detailing the Labours of the Farmer, Steward, Plowman, Hedger, Cattle-Man, Shepherd, Field-Worker, and Dairymaid. to Which Are Added Explanatory Notes, Remarks, Etc., by John S. Skinner Henry Stephens, 1852 Agriculture, 1966 Longman Strides in Agriculture B. Kanjala, 2018 Agriculture for Beginners Revised Edition Charles William Burkett, 2018-06-29
Agriculture for Beginners Revised Edition by Charles William Burkett Since its first publication Agriculture for Beginners has found a welcome in thousands of schools and homes Naturally many suggestions as to changes additions and other improvements have reached its authors Naturally too the authors have busied themselves in devising methods to add to the effectiveness of the book Some additions have been made almost every year since the book was published To embody all these changes and helpful suggestions into a strictly unified volume to add some further topics and sections to bring all farm practices up to the ideals of to day to include the most recent teaching of scientific investigators these were the objects sought in the thorough revision which has just been given the book The authors hope and think that the remaking of the book has added to its usefulness and attractiveness They believe now as they believed before that there is no line of separation between the science of agriculture and the practical art of agriculture They are assured by the success of this book that agriculture is eminently a teachable subject They see no difference between teaching the child the fundamental principles of farming and teaching the same child the fundamental truths of arithmetic geography or grammar They hold that a youth should be trained for the farm just as carefully as he is trained for any other occupation and that it is unreasonable to expect him to succeed without training If they are right in these views the training must begin in the public schools This is true for two reasons 1 It is universally admitted that aptitudes are developed tastes acquired and life habits formed during the years that a child is in the public school Hence during these important years every child intended for the farm should be taught to know and love nature should be led to form habits of observation and should be required to begin a study of those great laws upon which agriculture is based A training like this goes far toward making his life work profitable and delightful 2 Most boys and girls reared on a farm get no educational training except that given in the public schools If then the truths that unlock the doors of nature are not taught in the public schools nature and nature s laws will always be hid in night to a majority of our bread winners They must still in ignorance and hopeless drudgery tear their bread from a reluctant soil The authors return hearty thanks to Professor Thomas

F Hunt University of California Professor Augustine D Selby Ohio Experiment Station Professor W F Massey horticulturist and agricultural writer and Professor Franklin Sherman Jr State Entomologist of North Carolina for aid in proofreading and in the preparation of some of the material We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
