Ackerman, 2024-03-19 Twelve studies by eminent art historian James S. Ackerman This collection contains studies written by art historian James Ackerman over the past decade Whereas Ackerman's earlier work assumed a development of the arts as they responded to social economic political and cultural change his recent work reflects the poststructural critique of the presumption of progress that characterized Renaissance and modernist history and criticism In this book he explores the tension between the authority of the past which may act not only as a restraint but as a challenge and stimulus and the potentially liberating gift of invention He examines the ways in which artists and writers on art have related to ancestors and to established modes of representation as well as to contemporary experiences The origins studied here include the earliest art history and criticism the beginnings of architectural drawing in the Middle Ages and Renaissance Leonardo Da Vinci's sketches for churches the first in the Renaissance to propose supporting domes on sculpted walls and piers and the first architectural photographs Imitation refers to artistic achievements that in part depended on the imitation of forms established in practices outside the fine arts such as ancient Roman rhetoric and print media Conventions like language facilitate communication between the artist and viewer but are both more universal understood across cultures and more fixed resisting variation that might diminish their clarity The three categories are closely linked throughout the book as most acts of representation partake to some degree of all three La vie culturelle à Montréal vers 1900 Micheline Cambron, Bibliothèque nationale du Québec, 2005 Canadian Reference Sources Mary E. Montreal, City of Spires Clarence Epstein, 2012-03-19 T00:00:00-04:00 Of the fifty religious buildings discussed in this book only a precious few remain standing despite the fact that Montreal boasts one of the largest and most eclectic groupings of Georgian and Victorian structures of any city in North America Following the British conquest of New France in 1759 a remarkable series of transformations took place in the small Catholic trading town of Montreal Given the diversity of settlers forced to live side by side the new church buildings that were to rise became strategic public spaces meeting places as well as power bases It was no wonder that by the time Mark Twain toured Canada's first metropolis in the 1880s he found that one could not throw a brick in the place without breaking a church window By addressing the social religious and architectural issues surrounding these colonial era structures it will become apparent that Montreal was at once a shining jewel in England's imperial crown a chief outpost of Catholicism in the New World as well as the British North American headquarters for more than a dozen independent congregations

French Encounters with the American Counterculture 1960-1980 Caroline Maniaque-Benton, 2016-12-05 French American interrelationships in the areas of design and creative thinking have been under acknowledged It is normally asserted that French architects looked to North America for technical lessons in the development of modern architecture in the 1960s but that the French cultural environment was generally hostile to American ideas This book includes interviews with French architects who visited the United States in the 1960s 1970s and then assumed influential positions in the press and education in France Some of these architects found in non mainstream America and its radical groups of architectural drop outs a liberating force free of the taint of American capitalism and the high investment technology Often living in alternative student communities they saw highly innovative low cost technical and structural systems placed in the service of collective forms of living which represented a critique not only of professional architectural practice but also of bourgeois forms of living Many of them also studied in American schools of architecture and came in contact with an intellectual and interdisciplinary style of architectural education unavailable in France at that time
