Abstract: This study was designed to assess the effect of a 12-week, 1000 kcal/day energy-restricted diet on the body composition and metabolic profile of obese women. The study was conducted in a clinical setting and involved 15 obese women (mean age 45.8 ± 1.2 years, mean BMI 38.5 ± 1.2 kg/m²). The women were randomly assigned to either a control group (n = 8) or an intervention group (n = 7). The control group received no dietary intervention, while the intervention group received a 1000 kcal/day energy-restricted diet. The study was conducted over a 12-week period. The primary outcome measures were body composition (fat mass, lean mass, and total body mass) and metabolic profile (fasting glucose, insulin, and triglyceride levels). The results showed that the intervention group had a significant reduction in fat mass and total body mass compared to the control group. There was no significant change in lean mass. The metabolic profile improved in the intervention group, with a significant reduction in fasting glucose, insulin, and triglyceride levels. The study was limited by its small sample size and the lack of a placebo group. The results suggest that a 12-week, 1000 kcal/day energy-restricted diet can effectively reduce body mass and improve metabolic profile in obese women.
