The Wealth of the Elite Stamatis Tsigos, Kevin Daly, 2020-06-01 This book analyses the processes through which the modern forms of large fortunes are amassed Despite the recent spate of governmental and non governmental interest in inequality be it wealth or income the most privileged and fortunate have not generated much interest in mainstream economics As the issue of wealth accumulation is multifaceted the proposed book will not merely be an exercise in business history but deals with the issue from multiple perspectives accordingly employing alternative research methods Broadly the trends and dynamics in high tier wealth accumulation are coupled to the economic political and social mechanisms that have been in play for at least half a century or more in some parts of the world This approach leads to potential policy implications since much of the debate on wealth distribution centres on the extent to which wealth has been justly attained Further how wealth is distributed in the capitalist system can have an impact upon economic growth This book offers an alternative perspective on why we have witnessed the growth of a new social class of ultra rich This book will be of interest to academics and researchers in international economic bodies

The Internet Trap Matthew Hindman, 2018-09-25 A book that challenges everything you thought you knew about the online economy. The internet was supposed to fragment audiences and make media monopolies impossible. Instead, behemoths like Google and Facebook now dominate the time we spend online and grab all the profits from the attention economy. The Internet Trap explains how this happened. This provocative and timely book sheds light on the stunning rise of the digital giants and the online struggles of nearly everyone else and reveals what small players can do to survive in a game that is rigged against them. Matthew Hindman shows how seemingly tiny advantages in attracting users can snowball over time. The internet has not reduced the cost of reaching audiences; it has merely shifted who pays and how. Challenging some of the most enduring myths of digital life, Hindman explains why the internet is not the postindustrial technology that has been sold to the public, how it has become mathematically impossible for grad students in a garage to beat Google, and why net neutrality alone is no guarantee of an open internet. He also explains why the challenges for local digital news outlets and other small players are worse than they appear and demonstrates what it really takes to grow a digital audience and stay alive in today's online economy. The Internet Trap shows why even on the internet, there is still no such thing as a free audience.

Reconstructions in Middle East Economic History Don Babai, 2024-10-24 This volume explores major theoretical and empirical themes in the study of the economic history of the Middle East. Despite the relative neglect of economic history in Middle Eastern studies, this book makes a case for its importance as a discipline of study. On the one hand, it shows promise in illuminating the economic base of historical trends and events; on the other, it can elucidate the historical foundations of economic continuity and change. The chapters employ an array of theoretical and methodological approaches and ultimately demonstrate how economics and history, along with political economy, complement each other in studying the Middle East. Among the substantive topics explored are the trajectories of the Arab Spring, institutional change, and economic development in the early Ottoman Empire; the destructive effects of the reordering of property rights in Iraq by the American-led occupation authority; the evolution of the political economy of the Islamic Republic of Iran; and the determinants of movements in the yields of Egyptian and Ottoman sovereign debt following political and economic crises in the 19th and early 20th centuries. The book will be of interest to scholars and students of economic history, political economy, and the Middle East.
