Suggested Reading

- Zumdahl Chapter 14 Section 14.1, 14.2, 14.6, & 14.7

Essential Question

- What is the relationship between the strength of an acid (base) the the extent of dissociation?

Learning Objectives:.

- Distinguish between strong and weak acids and bases in terms of the extent of dissociation, reaction with water and electrical conductivity.
- State whether a given acid or base is strong or weak.
- Distinguish between strong and weak acids and bases, and determine the relative strengths of acids and bases using experimental data.
- Write the equilibrium expression for acid dissociation in water.

Introduction

The Bronsted-Lowry concept considers an acid-base reaction as a proton-transfer reaction. It is useful to consider acid-base reactions as competitions between species for protons. From this point of view, you can order acids by their relative strengths as proton donors. The strong acids are those that lose their protons more easily than other acids. Similarly, the stronger bases are the ones that hold on to protons more strongly than other bases. Lets look at objective one from above.

Distinguish between strong and weak acids and bases in terms of the extent of dissociation, reaction with water and electrical conductivity:

Strong Acid	Weak Acid	Strong Base	Weak Base
Completely dissociates	Partly dissociates	Completely dissociates	Partly dissociates
