

CHINESE INVENTIONS

People have lived in China for a very long time. China's ancient culture has given the world many things. It has produced major religions as Taoism and Confucianism. It has also produced many inventions.

Many Chinese inventions were brought to the Islamic world and to Europe by traders. Some traveled by ship. Some traveled on land, by the Silk Road. Some inventions changed life in Europe and the Middle East.

Four important Chinese inventions are called "the Four Great Inventions." They are printing, the compass, papermaking, and gunpowder. They changed life in China. Later, they changed life in the Islamic world and in Europe.

Magnetic needle compasses were used for navigation by the year 1119. A compass always points north. It keeps travelers from getting lost. Long-distance sea travel would be impossible without the compass.

In the 9th century AD, Chinese alchemists were looking for the secret of eternal life. Instead, they discovered gunpowder by accident. Gunpowder changed warfare around the world. Weapons could shoot farther, and they were more destructive.

An official of the Han Dynasty, Cai Lun, made paper around the year 105 AD. He used fibers from plants such as mulberry. He also used fish nets, old rags, and hemp.
