

- The leaves of Plant A will turn black after the starch test
- The leaves of Plant B will remain orange/brown after starch test

LIMITING FACTORS

- Limiting factor: something present in the environment in such short supply that it restricts life processes.

Light Intensity

- As the amount of light increases, the rate of photosynthesis increases (A-B)
- The limiting factor is light
- Increasing the amount of light after a certain point has no effect on the rate (C)
- The limiting factor is now carbon dioxide or temperature

Carbon Dioxide Concentration

- As the amount of carbon dioxide increases, the rate of photosynthesis increases (A-B)
- The limiting factor is Carbon dioxide
- Increasing amount of Carbon dioxide after a certain point has no effect on rate (C)
- The limiting factor is now light or temperature (warmth)

Temperature

- As temperature increases, the rate of photosynthesis increases until it reaches optimum temperature 40°C (A)
- The limiting factor is the temperature
- Increasing the temperature above 40°C will cause the enzymes to denature (B)
- This will decrease rate of photosynthesis

GLASSHOUSE SYSTEMS

To increase the crop yield farmers control the limiting factors:

- CO₂ enrichment: paraffin is burnt to increase CO₂ concentration by three times the original amount and doubling the yield
- Optimum temperature: thermostatically controlled heaters make the temperature right for the enzymes to work
- Optimum light: light has a high intensity for more photosynthesis, the correct wavelength (red and blue not green) and duration controls production of fruit

LEAF STRUCTURE

- Cuticle: waxy layer that prevents water loss from top of the leaf
- Epidermis: transparent cell that allows sunlight to pass through to the palisade cell
- Palisade: found at the top of the cell and contains many chloroplasts which absorb sunlight.
- Spongy mesophyll layer: irregularly shaped cells which create air spaces to allow gaseous exchange to take place; do not contain many chloroplasts
- Vascular Bundle: made up of xylem and phloem
- Xylem: vessel which transports water and dissolved minerals and has lignified walls made of cellulose
- Phloem: vessel which transports nutrients
- Stomata: little holes that opens and closes to allow gaseous exchange to take place. The stomata close to prevent water loss and open to let gases come in and out. When guard cells lose water, the stomata close (at night), while the stomata open when guard cells gain water & swell (during the day).

XYLEM

- Unidirectional vessel which transports water and dissolved minerals.
- Walls are made out of waterproof lignin.
- Water moves up due to transpiration and osmosis

PHLOEM

- Bidirectional vessel
- Contains sieve elements which allow sugars to pass from one cell to next downwards
- Contains companion cells which provide energy for active transport of sugars all over plant.
- Translocation moves organic molecules (sugars, amino acids) from source to sink.
- Phloem vessels still have cross walls called sieve plates that contain pores.
- Companion cells actively load sucrose into the phloem.
- Water follows high solute in phloem by osmosis. A positive pressure potential develops moving mass of phloem sap forward.
- Phloem still contains small amount of cytoplasm along the walls but the organelle content is greatly reduced.
- Companion cells actively unload (ATP used) the organic molecules

MINERAL REQUIREMENTS

Nitrogen

- Needed for protein synthesis
- Deficiency: small plant, slow growth, top leaves pale, bottom leaves dead and roots slightly affected

Magnesium

- Needed for chlorophyll synthesis
- Deficiency: plant lack chlorophyll, leaves yellow but normal roots
