Beyond Great Walls Dee Mack Williams, 2002 This is an ethnographic study of a community of Mongolian herders who have been undergoing dramatic environmental and social transformations since 1980 It provides a rare window of observation into a fascinating and important though remote and relatively understudied region of modern China and documents some of the unintended harmful consequences of decollectivization and economic development Initially the book presents a case study of land degradation and shows how competing social and cultural forces at the local national and international level actively shape that process More broadly it focuses on local experiences of modernization and the ways that marginalized people creatively appropriate alien technologies to serve their own ethnic identity and cultural renewal The book aims to deepen our understanding of environmental change as a social process by exploring significant tensions between such symbolic dichotomies as Chinese Mongol farmer herder private collective development conservation Western Asian and scientific indigenous It argues that the reconstruction of local landscape cannot be separated from the social context of economic insecurity and political fear nor from the cultural context of group identity and environmental symbolism Ideologically informed perceptions of the land prove to be highly relevant in both shaping and contesting international development agendas national grassland policies and the daily practices of local production In presenting the full range of material and symbolic stakes now in play on the Chinese grasslands the book demonstrates that human land interactions involve social dimensions on a global scale of widely underestimated complexity Throughout the author draws from his extensive fieldwork to enrich his study with poignant and sometimes humorous anecdotes and biographical sketches
