And Cites Commercially Exploited Fish Species Overexploitation:

The Use of CITES for Commercially-exploited Fish Species Solène Guggisberg, 2015-12-11 This book examines the legality adequacy and efficacy of using the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES for commercially exploited fish species and assesses whether the existing institutional cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization FAO and regional fisheries management organizations RFMOs is efficient This case study also provides an interesting lens to approaching wider international law issues Indeed finding ways to achieve effective governance of transboundary or global natural resources is central to the peaceful use of oceans and land Furthermore the role of science in advising decision makers is a sensitive issue which deserves scrutiny and is similar in many regimes Finally the complex problem of fragmentation of international law is acute in various fields of environmental law as in all rapidly developing areas of international regulations

Implementing the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora through national fisheries legal frameworks Nakamura, J.N. and Kuemlangan, B., 2020-11-11

An increasing number of commercially exploited and managed aquatic species has been listed in the Appendices to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES triggering the attention from the fisheries sector of States on how listing would impact on the management of the relevant fisheries CITES regulates international trade in certain aquatic species including those which are and can be commercially exploited and which are being managed by the fisheries sector The fisheries sector legal frameworks will have to recognize and enable the various requirements provided for in CITES including the making of non detriment findings and ensuring that there is a designated management authority and scientific authority to take certain decisions in respect of listed commercially exploited and managed aquatic species This sourcebook provides clarifications on the relationship of CITES with the fisheries sector and provides guidance on how national fisheries legal frameworks can optimize the implementation of CITES The realisation of this sourcebook in 2020 designated as a super year for nature and biodiversity represents a timely and useful contribution to fisheries management by i raising awareness of CITES ii enhancing comprehension of the CITES regime and its relationship with the fisheries sector and iii where a deliberate decision is made by a country to implement CITES through its national fisheries legal frameworks providing guidance as to what do it and how to do it

International Law of Sharks Erika J. Techera, Natalie Klein, 2017-04-18 In International Law of Sharks Erika J Techera and Natalie Klein provide an in depth analysis of the current legal frameworks that relate to these important species The authors offer ways in which to overcome obstacles that prevent existing laws from working better and identify best practice global governance options while highlighting opportunities for legal reform Scientific evidence indicates that sharks play a critical role in maintaining marine ecosystem health yet current governance regimes have not been effective and many shark species continue to diminish In this context effective laws are critical to improve sharks conservation status This volume also explores the broader relevance of oceans governance by identifying appropriate legal frameworks and regulatory mechanisms that balance conservation and utilisation of marine species in general The Development of the Law of the Sea by UNCLOS Dispute Settlement Bodies Lan Ngoc Nguyen,2023-02-09 This is the first study to provide both a systematic assessment of the ways by which the dispute settlement bodies of the United Convention on the Law of the Sea UNCLOS contribute to the development of the law of the sea and an exposition of the factors that explain such contribution The book analyses UNCLOS dispute settlement bodies decisions and the legal reasoning in key areas of the law of the sea It further examines the factors that impact the decision making process of UNCLOS tribunals to explain the parameters within which UNCLOS tribunals operate and how this impacts their ability and willingness to develop the law The book provides a unique reference point for lecturers researchers and students of international law particularly law of the sea as well as practitioners and government advisors who wish to gain comprehensive insights into the functioning and the role of the UNCLOS dispute settlement system Market Denial and International Fisheries Regulation Darren S. Calley,2011-10-14 Flag of convenience fishing seriously undermines efforts to protect the marine environment To counter this threat Market Denial and International Fisheries Regulation rests on the logic of the most basic tenet of economics if no market exists for a product then producers will cease to produce Denying market access to the flag of convenience fishing fleet should significantly reduce instances of illegal unreported and unregulated IUU fishing In areas beyond national jurisdiction not only is market denial the most effective means of undermining the IUU fleet it is for most practical purposes the only way to do so To what extent however do the laws of the sea and international trade allow groups of States to close their markets to non compliant fishing vessels Biological Diversity Conservation and the Law Cyrille de Klemm,Clare Shine,1993 Covers the full spectrum of legal mechanisms available for conserving biodiversity Part 1 discusses the scope of state powers to conserve wild species and habitats legal mechanisms for controlling taking procedures for listing species in need of conservation measures mechanisms for controlling trade and the challenges of enforcement Part 2 covers area based conservation at local and national level as well as in transfrontier protected areas and areas beyond national jurisdiction It discusses public ownership voluntary agreements and regulatory measures and looks at a number of innovative instruments planning controls incentives and disincentives

Action Plan for the Conservation of Sturgeons (Acipenseridae) in the Danube River Basin Jürg Bloesch, 2006-01-01 Six species of sturgeons are native to the Danube River Basin The need for conservation action is urgent given that recent observations in the Lower Danube indicate that all sturgeon populations are near extinction Due to the high commercial value of sturgeon products in particular caviar the pressure from poaching and illegal trade remains intense These species will not survive unless fishing practices are greatly addressed and both migration routes and habitats for all life cycle stages are protected Through national action and international co ordination this action plan aims to secure viable populations of all Danube sturgeon species by sustainable management and restoration of their natural habitats and migratory corridors

Strengthening International Fisheries Law in an Era of Changing Oceans Richard Caddell, Erik J Molenaar, 2019-04-04 This collection addresses the central question of how the current international framework for the regulation of fisheries may be strengthened in order to meet the challenges posed by changing fisheries and ocean conditions in particular climate change International fisheries law has developed significantly since the 1990s through the adoption and establishment of international instruments and bodies at the global and regional levels Global fish stocks nevertheless remain in a troubling state and fisheries management authorities face a wide array of internal and external challenges including operational constraints providing effective management advice in the face of scientific uncertainty and non compliance by States with their international obligations This book examines these challenges and identifies options and pathways to strengthen international fisheries law While it has a primarily legal focus it also features significant contributions from specialists drawn from other disciplines notably fisheries science economics policy and international relations in order to provide a fuller context to the legal policy and management issues raised Rigorous and comprehensive in scope this will be essential reading for lawyers and non lawyers interested in international fisheries regulation in the context of profoundly changing ocean conditions

Allocating International Responsibility Between Member States and International Organisations Nikolaos Voulgaris, 2019-05-16 The ever growing interaction between member States and international organisations results all too often in situations of non conformity with international law eg peacekeeping operations international economic adjustment programmes counter terrorism sanctions Seven years after the finalisation of the International Law Commission's Articles on the Responsibility of International Organisations ARIO international law on the allocation of international responsibility between these actors still remains unsettled The confusion around the nature and normative calibre of the relevant rules the paucity of relevant international practice supporting them and the lack of a clear and principled framework for their elaboration impairs their application and restricts their ability to act as effective regulatory formulas. This study aims to offer doctrinal clarity in this area of law and purports to serve as a point of reference for all those with a vested interest in the topic. For the first time since the publication of the ARIO, all international responsibility issues dealing with interactions between member States and international organisations are put together in one book under a common approach. Structured around a systematisation of the interactions between these actors, the study provides an analytical framework for the regulation of indirect responsibility scenarios. Based on the ideas of the intellectual fathers of international law such as Scelle's doublément fonctionnel theory and Ago's derivative responsibility model, the book employs old ideas to add original argumentation to a topic that has been dealt with extensively by recent commentators.
