Encyclopedia of Literary Translation Into English: A-L O. Classe,2000

Diminutives in English Klaus P. Schneider,2012-10-24 That English has no diminutives is a common myth The present study shows however that English does possess diminutives and not only analytic but also synthetic diminutive markers Analytic markers include first and foremost little as well as other adjectives from the same word field whereas the inventory of synthetic markers comprises suffixes as for instance ie ette let kin een s er poo and pegs These markers are examined from a grammatical and a pragmatic perspective in an integrative formal functional framework The grammatical perspective involves phonological morphological and semantic features while the pragmatic perspective involves pragmalinguistic as well as sociopragmatic features on the levels of the speech act and larger interactive units in dialogue The findings reveal that English diminutive suffixes are in fact among the most productive suffixes of the English language While the suffixes share a number of features each has developed its own profile specifically regarding semantic and pragmatic features In everyday conversation there is a division of labour between the synthetic and the analytic type of formation concerning the communicative functions of diminutives and their distribution in discourse The choice of formal device and its function depend crucially on pragmatic factors notably on the illocution the interactive status the realisation strategy and the politeness value of the utterances in which diminutives are employed and also on the relationship between the interlocutors a phonetic description of intonation in Cameroon English a postcolonial variety of English Its focus is on the usage of specific tones paratone and the intonational marking of the information status in discourse Two main descriptive frameworks are used namely the Discourse Intonation and the Auto Segmental Metrical frameworks Findings of the study are based on the auditory and acoustic analyses of natural conversation as well as read speech and with relation to the sociolinguistic variables of education and gender the linguistic variable speaking style These findings demonstrate for example that unlike speakers of other postcolonial Englishes of Nigerian English Cameroon English speakers make new information more prominent or louder than given information in the discourse structure Furthermore it is shown that Cameroon English speakers make extensive use of the falling pitch movement in speech which leads the author to conclude that the falling tone does a lot of work in Cameroon English Lastly the findings also reveal that sociolinguistic theories postulated in native English communities do not necessarily apply in postcolonial English settings given that native English and postcolonial Englishes have been developing along different lines
