

DOG FISH (Cartilaginous Fish) DISSECTION*Part 1: External Anatomy

The dogfish has a proarist and streamlined body shape that is built for fast, long distance swimming like its relative, the shark. The body is divided into the head, trunk, and tail.

1. Touch the fish! All members of your lab group need to touch the dogfish. Pick it up and feel it, with your bare hands. Can you feel the placoid scales? They give the dog fish an almost sand paper-like feel, but actually serve to aid in reducing friction in the water.

2. Measure the dogfish. Use your ruler to measure the length from the tip of the head to the tip of the tail of the shark. Remember to measure in centimeters! _____ cm

The spiny dogfish has a double dorsal fin. The anterior (front) dorsal fin is larger than the posterior (back) dorsal fin. The spiny dogfish also has two dorsal spines along the bottom of each dorsal fin. The spines carry a poison secreted by glands at their base. Measure these spines from the point of attachment to the tip of the spine. Don't forget to include your unit of measurement! Spine 1: _____ Spine 2: _____

The caudal fin is divided into two lobes (portions): a larger dorsal lobe and a smaller ventral lobe. This type of uneven tail is known as a heterocercal tail. Measure the heterocercal tail from tip to tip: _____

3. Observe the exterior of the dogfish

Along the sides of the body is a light-colored horizontal stripe, along the space where the counter shading meets, called the lateral line. This line is made up of a series of tiny pores that lead to receptors that are sensitive to the mechanical movement of water and sudden changes of pressure. Does this line extend the full length of the side of the dog fish? _____ What is its length? _____

A. Examine the anterior view of the dogfish.

The rostrum is the pointed snout at the anterior end. Having a tapered tip at the anterior and helps overcome water resistance while swimming.

The eyes are prominent in dog fish and sharks, and are very similar to the eyes of man. A transparent cornea covers and protects the eye. A darkly pigmented iris can be seen below the cornea with the pupil at its center. Upper and lower eyelids protect the eye. Just inside the lower lid is a membrane that extends over the surface of the eye to cover the cornea.

Large spiracle openings are located posterior and dorsal to the eyes. The spiracle is an in-current water passageway leading into the mouth for respiration.

Most dog fish have five external gill slits located on their sides, behind the mouth and in front of the pectoral fins. Water taken in by the mouth and spiracles is passed over the internal gills and forced out by way of the gill slits. Measure the longest gill length: _____ Smallest gill length: _____

B. Examine the mouth of the dogfish

The opening to the mouth of dogfish and sharks is always on the underside. The teeth are sharp and pointed so BE CAREFUL! There are several rows of flattened teeth lying behind the upright set ready to replace them when worn out or lost. Remove one of the teeth to look at under the dissecting microscope, then sketch what you see.
