Describing Death in America National Research Council, Institute of Medicine, Division on Earth and Life Studies, National Cancer Policy Board, 2003-05-03 National expenditures for medical care in the months and days preceding death are enormous But we do not know whether that money is buying good quality care or optimizing the quality of life of those dying or whether the situation is getting better or worse over time The information that exists describing death at a national level though some of it is very informative is fragmentary This report recommends ways to fill the information gaps by better use of existing nationally representative data and through some new measures in particular a new ongoing National Mortality Followback Survey The aim is to allow us to benchmark where we are today as a society and what goals we can set to minimize pain and suffering and maximize the quality of life of all of us who will die in the years to come
