

Drawing Conclusion

refers to information that is implied or inferred. This means that the information is never clearly stated. Writers often tell you more than they say directly. They give you hints or clues that help you "read between the lines."

Points to remember:

Drawing Conclusions

Drawing conclusions involves using facts from a passage along with what you know and thinking about the writer's meaning. Some authors do not explain everything in their writing. Instead, they leave certain clues that readers can use to understand what is happening.

Example

Ashley wanted to go outside and play. His father suggested they could play catch. Excited, Ashley agreed to his idea. He grabbed his mitt and shuffled it into his backpack while his father filled his duffel bag elsewhere. When they arrived at the park, he noticed his father pulling out a football from his bag. Ashley asked him, "What's that for?" His father replied, "To play catch." Ashley was clearly confused.

Ask yourself...

- What conclusion can I draw from this passage?
- What clues does the author give me?
- What do I already know?
- What is the author's purpose in this passage?
- What is the author trying to say?

Look for useful facts

Ashley and his father want to play catch. Ashley brought his mitt. His father brought his football.

Use what you know

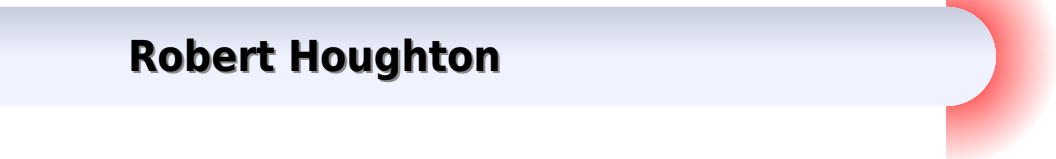

You can often use a football or a football in a game of playing catch.

Make a conclusion guess

Both Ashley and his father have different conclusions based on the suggestion to play catch.
